SPRING PARK

A letter has just reached us from our friend, C. W. Butters, who left the Park en route for Benicia, Cal., September 3d and who had quite a serious experience on his trip. He says, "We left, Houston, Texas, eight hours ahead of the cloudburst that swallowed up Galveston and had reached Deming, New Mexico, when the second cloudburst struck us and ten miles beyond we were obliged to stop on account of the rails being under water. We stood there about fifteen minutes when it was discovered that the train was sinking in the mud at the rate of eighteen inches an hour. The engineer tried to back the train to Deming, but could not, so the next best thing was to crowd on all steam and plow through the water. The train men said it would be better to drown quickly than to sink in the mud by inches. We ran about four miles in two feet of water, then we got onto harder ground and staid there sixteen hours, waiting for the track men to fix the rails for miles and miles ahead. In the meantime there was another cloud behind us to give me an idea of what a genuine cloudburst was. I know now. We left the siding at sunset with lightning all around us, but no thunder. At nine o'clock we were in a sea of water; no rails to be seen for hours. We ran all night and at sunrise we had made just fifty-two miles; just moved to keep from sinking. At Lordsburg it began to improve, but the water had washed the cross-ties out in many places and California still seemed a long way off." His many friends will be glad to know that Mr. Butters was not "swallowed up" at Galveston, as we so much feared, and that he finally reached California in safety.

Mrs. John Bentley left this week for Benedict, Fla.

Mrs. Phil Shafer has gone to Fort Myers to join her husband and expects to remain during the winter.

Harry Fuller has been suffering from an abscess, but is out again.

T. C. Thomsen has been having a relapse of chills and fever.

Will Goin, of Ocala, has bought the piano at Elma Hall.

Clarence Smith is seriously ill and not expected to live.

SPOILING EVERYTHING

She was a very small girl with a very large sense of her own importance, and the public school which she attended was to her the center of the universe. So when Memorial Day came, and it was announced that pupils of the schools were requested to march in the procession, Stella's excitement knew no bounds. She rushed home from school on the appointed day, and finding that domestic affairs were still moving in their ordinary channel, and that the convenience of other members of the family had been consulted in the usual dinner hour, she looked about her in amazement, and exclaimed:

"I must have my dinner and go back early. Why, mother, the whole thing will be spoiled if I don't get there!"

"How we smiled at the thought of it—the one little maiden among so many hundreds!" said the lady who related the incident. "But many a time since, when I have set my mind on something I wanted to accomplish in haste, and found myself growing irritable and impatient over hindrances, I have suddenly remembered Stella. After all, the universe is large, God's plans are great, and if some purpose beyond our ken chance to cross our petty projects it is scarcely likely that everything will be spoiled; the procession will still go on."
